Debate over tanning restrictions for minors heats up

Despite social convention that bronze skin is beautiful — consumers need only open a magazine or peruse a beauty aisle to see the myriad of products available to create or enhance a golden glow — governments are pushing back at what has become a national trend: tanning.

According to a March 18 report in The Kansas City Star, more than 28 million Americans tan annually; of those, 2.3 million are teenagers. The Missouri state government, in an effort to slow down the growing fad, has one measure currently up for vote that requires teenagers under the age of 17 to have parental permission to tan. The bill, HB 1411, has already passed 98-46 in the House, KOMU reported. Should HB 1411 make it through the Senate, Missouri will join at least 33 other states that limit tanning for minors.

"I screen, you screen, we all screen for school dreams!"

Mound City R-2 preschool teacher Ann Walker's classroom was quietly busy on Tuesday afternoon, April 8. In one partitioned cube, teacher Sarah Osburn instructed and observed how her student arranged and rearranged colorful geometric shapes ("Start another pile, lovey, one more," she said), while another teacher, Debi Clifton, practiced sounds.

"I spy something with a 'wuh,'" Clifton said, propping open a large board book illustration.

"Watermelon!" Cade Tubbs responded.

"It does sound like watermelon," Clifton said. "Good job, buddy."

For the rest of Tuesday and into Wednesday, April 9, the Mound City School District conducted its annual screening for children aged three to five for the 2014-2015 school year. According to Walker, the number of young learners who participated was close to 60. Each of those children participated in motor, concepts and language screenings. The school, Walker explained, uses standardized testing, and the purpose of the screening is to identify weak areas a student might have. By doing so, parents — with input from teachers — may address any issues at home.

"It's a guideline for parents," Walker said.

An additional component is a health screening with Susan Lentz, Holt County nurse. Children's hearing and eyesight are tested, and, like with the academic screening, any problem areas are identified.

Students, Walker said, also take part in round-up activities, which typically involve classroom readiness and information for parents.

Overall, the screenings, which are open to any child, regardless of whether he or she will enroll in school, is a good barometer of a child's development, and all schools in the county are conducting the assessments.

In Walker's classroom that day, as one or two children collected a sticker and filed out, another hopped around on one foot in a corner area.

"You did it! Good job!" came the reply.

Grudge match: 60/40 vs PILT

In the tax approach showdown, the Holt County Commission has lent its weight to the 60/40, while Element Power prefers another contender: the income approach. Here's how the numbers break down.

The debate over a tax approach for Mill Creek Wind Farm is starting to come to a close, thanks to Holt County Assessor LaDonna Jones standing firm on the 60/40 tax approach.

The 60/40 approach, which the County Commission has decided to employ without an Enhanced Enterprise Zone (EEZ) or a Renewed Energy Green Zone (REGZ), gives Element Power a 60 percent tax break for the depreciation of the wind farm infrastructure (the turbines, primarily). The county can then tax 40 percent of the value of the wind farm for the first two years of the 20-year project. In years three and four, that percentage drops to 37 percent; for years 5 through 20, that percentage decreases again and stays steady at 35 percent.

While the county is confident with the 60/40 approach, Element Power, over the last few months, has emphasized the benefits of the income approach, with the addition of a payment in lieu of taxes (PILT) of $1 million per year for the 20 years of the project. This approach was discussed at the Holt County Commission meeting on Wednesday, March 12, and local school superintendents asked that Element Power provide revenue data to ensure transparency. As of Thursday, April 3, Element Power, according to project manager Scott Zeimetz, was in the process of gathering the requested information.

In the meantime, Holt County Clerk Kathy J. Kunkel has provided a breakdown of the income from a sample wind turbine (though Element Power estimates there could be 85 to 100 turbines) that compares a PILT payment with the 60/40 and its accompanying decreases. Please note that the mill tax levy rate (identified as Row 3 under "Distribution," starting with "3.9368" in Tables 1 and 2) is set by the taxing authority in each district and could be subject to change. Additionally, the tax estimates in the table do not include substations, buried and overhead transmission lines and other real or personal property.

To the Editor:

The American Red Cross Midland Empire Chapter celebrated its volunteers and the work they do in the community during National Volunteer Week, April 6 - 12.

Last year, our volunteers provided food, shelter, comfort and hope to 108 local families who faced home fires and other disaster situations. They trained 3,104 people in lifesaving skills and assisted 89 military members, veterans and their families.

I want to invite the public to sign up to volunteer and be a part of our lifesaving work. We're looking for diverse volunteers of all ages and skill levels. Go to www.redcross.org/mo/st-joseph to learn more about volunteering with us and how to submit a volunteer application.

If you want to volunteer to help when a disaster strikes our community, download the Team Red Cross app. You'll receive notifications when Red Cross volunteers are needed in the area. The app can be found in the Apple App Store and the Google Play Store by searching for American Red Cross or by going to redcross.org/mobileapps.

News from Tiffany Heights: Easter activities abound

Residents of Tiffany Heights in Mound City, MO, both welcomed the upcoming Easter holiday and ended a walk-and-roll tour during the week of Monday, April 7.

The six-month rock and roll tour ended, and residents have started a new one. The top three walkers and rollers from the north hall were Audrey Heck, Carol Ball and Charles Milby. From the south hall, the top three walkers and rollers were Inez VanOrman, Judy Carney and Twyla Haer. The names of all six were put in a hat to be drawn for a lunch of choice. Milby and Haer were the big winners.

During the afternoon on Monday, residents made crosses to hang on their doors. Each cross had Easter lilies, the words "Jesus loves me" and a banner they wrote their names on. Shirley Jackson, Joan Smith, Debby Friend and Aimee Seymore assisted. Jackson also provided homemade apple bread as a treat.

The Prayer Warriors, led by Sue Roseman, Amanda Griffin and Barbara Hanlon, met on Tuesday morning, April 8. Pastor Jeremy Blevins and Dee Ann Heck provided Bible study that morning as well. During the afternoon, residents played a round of "Did you know?" The theme was the month of April, and residents learned that April 5 is deep-dish-pizza day, April 24 is pigs-in-a-blanket day, and April 27 is write-an-old-friend day. Sliced bread also began on April 1, 1954.

bridal shower and the dark circle around a woolly worm predicting the weather.

Heck played the piano on Thursday, April 10, before lunch. Bingo volunteers were Jackson, Hanlon, Jean McCall, Gordon Robbins, Mary Lee Privett, Denise Acklin and JoAnne Loucks. The winners of the game were Inez VanOrman and Emma Wright. Becky Poe provided news and views later in the afternoon.

Hanlon and Maria Shanklin provided glamour nails on Friday morning, April 11. Residents enjoyed listening to a couple more chapters from the "Unpacking Memories" book. The staff and residents at Tiffany Heights were also grateful to Judy Weis for her donation of two books to the library at Tiffany Heights. Pretzel Day was held in the afternoon, and residents enjoyed listening to the history of the snack. They later made soft pretzels to dip in cheese sauce.

Games of choice were encouraged on Saturday afternoon, April 12.

Larry Brickey and the Mound City Baptist Church provided services on Sunday morning, April 13. Afternoon worship was conducted by the Christian Fellowship Church.

MoDOT to lose funding

Without action soon, Missouri's Department of Transportation will be left with insufficient resources to maintain and improve Missouri's broad network of roads, bridges, railways and other critical means of moving people and goods.

The transportation department currently operates on a $685 million budget. Already, however, the department has had to stop adding new projects to its five-year building plan. In less than three years, the situation could become much worse. In 2017 it is estimated that the department's funding will drop to $325 million. At that point, department officials have said they won't be able to even maintain existing infrastructure.

On Tuesday, April 8, the Missouri House voted to ask voters whether the state should add a temporary one-cent sales tax to support the state's vital transportation needs. The measure is contained in House Joint Resolution 68, sponsored by Rep. Dave Hinson, a Republican from St. Clair. The Missouri Chamber of Commerce and Industry supports this measure.

"Missouri is in the middle of the nation's shipping and distribution corridors," Daniel P. Mehan, Missouri Chamber president and CEO, said. "With our beneficial location, our transportation infrastructure has been a critical asset to our efforts to grow our economy and attract business to Missouri. It's time to reinvest in this most basic asset. We thank the Missouri House for their effort to put this on the ballot, and we call on the Senate to do the same."

A similar measure in the Senate is Senate Joint Resolution 48, sponsored by Sen. Mike Kehoe, a Republican from Jefferson City. Kehoe's bill awaits a committee hearing.

Holt County arrest

The nominating committee's report was given and officers were elected.

Annamarie Hunziger spoke about her efforts to get a copy of the charter of William White Chapter.

The next meeting will be at 12 p.m. on Tuesday, May 6, at the Mound City United Methodist Church. Officers will be installed and a memorial service conducted.

Youth turkey season harvest tops 4,000

Young hunters checked 4,332 turkeys during Missouri's youth turkey hunting season Saturday and Sunday, April 12 and 13, topping the 4,000 mark for the second time in the youth season's 14-year history.

Top counties in the youth season were Franklin with 107 birds checked, Cedar with 96, and Webster with 92. The Missouri Department of Conservation recorded one nonfatal hunting incident during the weekend hunt.

Conservation Department Resource Scientist Jason Isabelle says the strong youth season harvest can be attributed partly to the carry-over of adult gobblers resulting from good turkey reproduction in 2011 and 2012. Favorable weather throughout much of the state during the mornings of the hunt also helped.

Missouri's only other 4,000-plus youth season harvest was in 2012, when young hunters checked 4,319 turkeys. Hunters age 6 through 15 are allowed to take one male turkey or turkey with a visible beard during the youth hunt. Those who do take a turkey during the youth hunt may not take a second bird until the second week of the regular spring turkey season.

The 2014 regular spring turkey season runs Monday, April 21, through Sunday, May 11. For more information, a copy of the 2014 Spring Turkey Hunting Regulations and Information booklet is available where permits are sold or at mdc.mo.gov/node/4051.

The Conservation Department's First Turkey Program is a great way to memorialize a hunter's first successful hunt. The program provides a free commemorative certificate suitable for framing and proud parents can even add a photo of the hunter with his or her bird. Creating a tangible reminder of a once-in-a-lifetime experience begins with visiting mdc.mo.gov/node/10469. The same site has forms for a hunter's first deer for youths or adults.

United Methodist Church to celebrate sesquicentennial

To take a look back at its impressive history, the United Methodist Church found its roots beginning to grow in 1864 when the Methodist Episcopal Church of Mound City was organized. The church counted five members at the time (the congregation now numbers around 180, Blevins estimated). The church itself was built in 1879 and measured 30 feet by 40 feet; it cost $1,400. In 1890 the church was moved from its original location on 4th Street to its current location at 7th and Nebraska Streets. Additions were gradually added to make the church what it is today, complete with copper steeple.

What was once a simple building has stretched and matured into a home that has also absorbed nearby congregations, such as those from Shiloh EUB Church and Fortescue United Methodist Church, and seen its flock tap into stores of generosity and creativity.

The women's group, SOS (Share on Saturday), described by member Heck as "the heartbeat of this church," has made a name for itself as the go-to caterers for the area by crafting meals for the Kiwanis Club, the Bellevue banquet, Market Square Day, and reunions and various fundraisers. The group also participates in PALS (Prayerful And Loving Snacks) with Mound City R-2 kindergarten and first graders; their compensation, Heck said, is "cards with pictures and thank you notes [telling us] that they love us."

The church routinely gives donations from its "Faith's Cupboard" to the Pantry of Plenty, and member Marie Wheeler turned to her needlework skills to craft 480 prayer mats for soldiers during Desert Storm in the 1990s.

To remember these efforts, anniversary committee members are compiling photographs, histories of member families and a history of the church to be included in a casebound annual, which will feature past ministers, updated member photographs and a memorial section dedicated to past members. Photos will be accepted until Oct. 1, and the book will be available for $40, or $50 for those who need to have the book mailed, at the beginning of 2015. T-shirts recognizing the anniversary are also for sale.

Anniversary committee members include Blevins, Heck, Kim Rosier, Robin Hall, Marcina Holstine, Sheri Wright, Vicky Taylor, Mike and Tommye Quilty, Karen Wedlock, Marjorie Field, Ernest and Linda Hester, Susan Rippen and Melinda Holstine.

The first United Methodist Church in Mound City - Stood at the intersection of 4th and Nebraska Streets for close to a dozen years before it was moved to its current location at 7th and Nebraska Streets.

The United Methodist Church - As it stands today; additions were added to the original structure to modernize and enlarge the building.

This Week's History

From the Mound City News archives

50 Years Ago - 1964

• One of the most vicious storms to hit this territory in many years arrived about 10 p.m. Sunday night. Some believe that just a thread kept it from being a real killer, for the severity of it sent more people to basements and storm caves than is usually the practice. First there was a bit of rain, then a strong wind and a few seconds later a fall of hail so heavy that visibility was practically zero. The next morning drifts of hail were a foot or two deep in places. The most damaged area near Mound City was reported to the south and east. The wind lashed at farm structures over a wide path and few acreages escaped damage. The busiest men in town were going to be the insurance agents. In addition to multiple reports of damaged farm structures, there was a report of the unusual which made for a little humor. It was reported that all outdoor toilets in the Shiloh neighborhood were blown over, and many completely demolished. Included were those at the following farms: Granville White, Emil Smith, Eldon Hiles, Harold Trimmer, Joye Trimmer, Earl French, Ellis Morgan, Leroy Kneale, Lincoln School, E.U.B. Church, Chauncey Huiatt and Roy Furhman.

25 Years Ago - 1989

• Stephanie Rhoades, eighth grader at Craig R-III School, spelled her way to entrance in the National Spelling Bee, to be held in Washington, D.C., in late May. Stephanie outspelled 30 other students in the annual Northwest Missouri Regional Spelling Bee held in the St. Joseph Civic Arena.

• It was announced at the Mound City Area Chamber of Commerce meeting that Hardee's was officially coming to Mound City. Three parcels of property were purchased by Aristocrat Foods of Cameron, MO. The properties sold were located near the termination of Highway 118 at its intersection with U.S. Highway 59, just off the I-29 intersection. The properties included the home of the late Eula Mae and Judd Browning, the residence of the late Harry and Ellen Varvel, and a small acreage from a Nebraska investor, Frank Krejci.

• The "world's largest" chimes, along with their accompanying red rock display at Tiffany Heights Nursing Home, had been drawing the attention of out-of-state visitors since the appearance of a story in the Capper's Weekly.

10 Years Ago - 2004

• The famous Forest City Diner was making a comeback following its closing after a wall collapse. Mike Sipes bought the building and business from Kelly and Roger Brock. Terri Brendle of Oregon was to manage the restaurant.

• Mound City aldermen and the mayor - three of them elected for the first time last week - toured city facilities including the water plant, the sewage lagoons and parks to get a look at some of the things they would be dealing with. Newly elected mayor, David Duncan, and aldermen Jim Krueger and Marilyn Roberts were joined by alderman Stan Seitz and city clerk Patsy Smith. City employees Randy Crowley, Kelly Graves and Richard Brown were also a part of the tour.

• Restoration work on tombstones continued throughout the spring at Mt. Hope Cemetery at Corning - and for the first time in nearly 20 years, there was a burial there.

• Mound City's prom royalty were Queen Jenna Loucks and King Alex Moore.

Women tackle projects and lessons at 9th Annual Women in the Outdoors event

A participant gets hands on - During one of the many classes offered at the Women in the Outdoors program at the Squaw Creek National Wildlife Refuge on Saturday, April 12. At the annual event, women participated in a hog roast and sunset hayride on Friday, April 11, before embarking on a series of classes, including fly tying, kayaking, feather painting, quilting, beekeeping, rain barrel making and dutch oven cooking, to name a few, the following day.

Two attendees - Hunker down over their antler art as part of Women in the Outdoors, which is sponsored by the National Wild Turkey Federation.

Crews on a roll to fill sinkhole

Crew members from J & E Concrete - Lay concrete over a repaired sinkhole on Thursday, April 10, at the intersection of Nebraska and 8th Streets in Mound City. According to Mayor Chris Krueger, a telephone company bored a hole through a storm drain pipe, most likely in 1996, and over the years, dirt, water and snow melt naturally collected at the low-lying area. "It's always been a bad spot, and now we know why," Krueger said. When the weather warmed, the telephone company moved the line and fixed the pipe and Hall Construction Co. excavated the hole and laid rock before J & E Concrete tackled the remaining work. As for payment, the city is hoping to work something out with the telephone company, Krueger said.

Such a restriction could affect teenagers in Holt County, many of whom prefer to tan regularly or before a special event. Hillary Russell, a sophomore at Mound City R-2, for example, routinely tans and did so before her high school's prom on April 5.

"I tan three times a week," she said, "usually with friends."

For Russell, however, tanning is something that should be done in moderation.

"It's not that bad a few days a week, but if you're going every day and becoming orange... [that's bad]," she said.

Russell uses the tanning bed at her mother's salon, "Lindsey's Shear Perfection," but AfterLooks and The Attic in Mound City also have tanning beds for use. All three businesses and their owners take tanning seriously.

Debbie Sportsman of AfterLooks explained that she does not allow anyone under the age of 15 to tan, and parents need to "say it's ok."

"Regulations are getting harder," Sportsman said. "We, as salon owners, give the same respect to tanning that we do to the salon."

AfterLooks also provides eye goggles and emphasizes sanitation and cleaning.

At The Attic, Teresa Showalter said that while there is a tanning bed, it is there for her customers' convenience. She also offers spray tanning and self-tanners for customers to apply at home.

As for the teens' perspective on the bill, Russell said, "I understand that parents need to make that decision." She, like the proprietors of tanning beds in Mound City, believe that everyone should avoid excessive tanning; a little goes a long way.

Northwest Missouri Horticulture: Two-year drought summary

"While the 2013 growing season was not as hard hit by drought and high temperatures compared to 2012, we did, unfortunately, have a second year of drought in a row.

In January 2013, most of Missouri was still in drought, either as a D1 or D2 drought stage. Spring in 2013 brought some significant relief, with rains eventually bringing the Drought Monitor rating of all of Missouri to a drought-free status by the end of May.

But that was short-lived. By mid-July, we were back to abnormally dry, and by the end of the month, most of the NW Region counties were back to a D1 drought stage. By the end of August, D2 drought was showing up across a good part of north Missouri.

So how did the year end up? If you look at just 2013, the National Weather Service forecast office in Pleasant Hill reports precipitation deficits from 8.77 below normal in downtown Kansas City to 1.09 below normal in Kirksville. St. Joseph had a deficit of 4.51 inches.

Chillicothe, on the other hand, actually had a surplus of 1.25 above normal for 2013. This surplus, however, was mostly due to above normal precipitation that fell during the first five months of 2013.

While 2013 was not as bad as 2012, when you look at the situation over two years, 2012-2013, the total deficits really add up. Downtown Kansas City, for example, was short 17.34 inches from January 1, 2012, to December 31, 2013. Kirksville was short a bit over 11 inches. St. Joseph was 12.33 below normal. And Chillicothe was 8.15 inches behind normal.

My own CoCoRaHS observations reflect a similar trend here in Gallatin. Using the new climate normals (1981-2010), my shortfall was 12.73 in 2012 and 2.09 for 2013. That gives a two-year deficit of 14.82 inches below normal.

So how does the situation look currently? North Missouri remains abnormally dry at present, except for the extreme northwest corner, which is classed as D-1 drought. While abnormally dry is not considered drought, I still believe we have major problems in our sub-surface root zone water supply. Most of the rain and snow we received this winter was not able to penetrate the frozen ground. We're still short.

Dr. Pat Guinan is our University of Missouri State Climatologist. He recently told me: "Significant precipitation deficits have accumulated across northwestern Missouri over the past couple years. Some relief occurred during the spring of last year, but drought returned the following summer and quickly reversed the brief trend of water recovery. It's imperative a wet weather pattern establish itself this spring because water resources above and below the ground have not entirely recovered since 2012. The antecedent conditions have increased the vulnerability for going into a drought this growing season if sufficient and timely rains do not return."

Another University of Missouri researcher is Dr. Randall Miles, an associate professor of soil science. He says that the soil in much of Missouri is still dry about four to five feet down where crop roots live. While this is an improvement from a year ago when the drought resulted in dry soils down to almost six feet, it still could produce poor yields for farmers, if it is not replenished.

Will we get the relief that we need? According to the Climate Prediction Center of the National Weather Service, their predictions show equal chances of above normal, normal or below normal precipitation. Also, the U.S. Seasonal Drought Outlook from March 20 to June 30 indicates that drought status removal is likely for all of Missouri.

That would be great news, if precipitation returns to normal. But remember those precipitation deficits and the shortage of water in the root zone... We still have a way to go to really get caught up.

The hunt is on for mushrooms

Spring mushroom hunting season is now open on Squaw Creek National Wildlife Refuge near Mound City until Tuesday, May 20. Permits are not required for visitors to enter the authorized areas of Loess Hills east of Highway 159 for mushroom hunting, but hunters must stay in the authorized areas; those who trespass into unauthorized refuge property, particularly the bottomland, which is home to state endangered species like the western massasauga rattlesnake, will be subject to citations and penalties. Additionally, disturbances to any unauthorized locations can be detrimental to floral, fauna and wildlife habitats. Refuge boundaries are identified by Blue Goose signs, and detailed maps showing the designated mushroom hunting zones are available at refuge headquarters and may be seen on signs in refuge parking lots.

The most common mushrooms collected by visitors on the refuge are "morels," which are easily recognized by the trained hunter and are delicious to eat; they are one of the most popular edible wild mushrooms in Missouri. Luckily for hunters, recent rains and warm temperature have created spring time conditions that encourage morel mushroom fruiting.

Caution is necessary when collecting wild mushrooms as a few species are mildly poisonous to deadly. All edible mushrooms, however, are distinctive in some obvious way. The publication "Edible and Poisonous Mushrooms," by Barbara Bassett, is an excellent reference to help identify mushrooms. A copy may be obtained from the Squaw Creek Refuge headquarters or from the Missouri Department of Conservation in St. Joseph.

More information on mushroom picking may be found by calling the Squaw Creek Refuge at (660) 442-3187.

Northwest Missourians stand together in Jefferson City

Great Northwest Day at the Capitol drew more than 200 area constituents to showcase their region in Jefferson City, MO, on Monday and Tuesday, April 7 and 8. Seventeen counties, multiple communities and representatives from business, education, health-care and government joined to discuss issues critical to the region.

The two-day event kicked off with a luncheon panel on Monday. Speakers included: Sarah Parker-Pauley, director of the Department of Natural Resources, who discussed water supply and wastewater infrastructure; David Nichols, director of the Department of Transportation, who reviewed transportation infrastructure and funding; and Roger Kurtz, executive director of the Missouri Association of School Administrators, who discussed education issues.

On Monday afternoon, department leaders held a roundtable discussion at which participants heard from the Northwest Missouri Area Agency on Aging, the Department of Economic Development, the Department of Agriculture, Missouri Farmers Care and Education emPowers-Ignite a Movement.

The Great Northwest Day at the Capitol evening event featured community booths and a festive reception designed to educate guests about Northwest Missouri. Attending the event were more than 200 participants from Northwest Missouri and nearly 165 guests, including one U.S. Supreme Court justice, 15 senators, 78 House of Representatives members, State Department representatives and officials from various executive departments.

Great Northwest Day concluded Tuesday morning with an inspirational and entertaining breakfast presentation by Supreme Court Judge Zel Fischer and introductions on the House and Senate floor.

Monica Bailey, 2014 event steering committee chair, was pleased with this year's participation.

"This was the twelfth year for Great Northwest Day, and it is still an event that regional citizens and legislators enjoy attending," Bailey said. "Our event allows us to share our points of pride with both our senators and representatives and each other. Our platform was well-articulated to our legislators, and our attendees learned more about those issues and other pertinent state-level matters. It speaks volumes about Great Northwest Day volunteers and attendees that it was so successful even after being postponed two months due to winter weather. I am so proud to be a part of this regional effort."

Volunteers from across the region begin planning for the event in August. Community and corporate sponsors provided financial support; those generous donors included Touchstone Energy Cooperatives, Heartland Health, KCP&L, Spencer Fane Britte & Browne, LLC, Cameron Regional Medical Center, Snyder & Associates, Olsson Associates, American Water - Missouri, Missouri Western Institute of Industrial and Applied Life Science, Northwest Missouri State University, North Central Missouri College, Saint Luke's Northland Hospital and CenturyLink. Great Northwest Day at the Capitol is a partnership of communities facilitated by Leadership Northwest Missouri.

Missouri State Highway Patrol: Take care during spring

Colonel Ron Replogle, superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, would like to remind the public that spring brings varying temperatures and weather patterns, which can bring challenges for motorists and boaters.

A main area of concern is flooding, which affects safety on both the waterways and roadways. Due to recent heavy rains, flooding could be extremely dangerous and potentially fatal. Boaters and motorists should be aware of many of the following conditions.

First, the Patrol is also asking boaters across the state to take extra precautions when boating in flooded areas. Large amounts of rainfall cause rivers and lakes to become swollen, and the right decision is to stay off the water. In areas where lakes or rivers spill over the banks, erosion and damage can occur to flooded structures, docks or water-laden levees by boat wakes; boaters should avoid operating in these areas. If operation in these areas is necessary, boaters should operate at idle speed so as to avoid causing a wake.

Second, flooded rivers and streams with moving currents present some of the most dangerous situations a boater can encounter. Fast-moving water can easily capsize or flip a boat or personal watercraft, especially when combined with fixed objects such as trees and buildings. Boaters should avoid any operations in these swift flowing waters.

Third, many lakes and rivers across the state have only seen routine increases in water levels. It is for the safety of the public and in the interest of minimizing damage to property that the Highway Patrol requests boaters avoid waterways that have been impacted by the most severe flooding.

Fourth, for their safety and that of their passengers, drivers are reminded to stay alert while driving in areas known to flood. Barricades closing a roadway are there for motorists' protection; drivers must respect barriers or barricades put in place by the Missouri Department of Transportation (MoDOT) — it is extremely dangerous and a violation of state law to drive around them.

Fifth, never drive through fast-moving waters; even a small amount of fast-moving water can sweep a slow-moving vehicle off the roadway. If a vehicle becomes stuck in rising water, get out quickly and move to higher ground.

Next, motorists should remember that spring's widely varying temperatures can leave roadways or bridge floors covered with frost. Even though roads appear to be clear, it is important to slow down and watch for slick areas, especially early in the morning. Temperature changes also cause fog to develop. Drivers need to slow down, turn on their headlights and be prepared to stop in foggy conditions.

Weather conditions requiring the use of windshield wipers are usually those that affect visibility. Motorists are reminded that state law requires them to turn on their vehicle's headlights any time they are using the windshield wipers. It only takes a second to turn on a vehicle's headlights; that second could make a motorist more visible to others and prevent a traffic crash.

Additionally, drivers need to be aware of farming equipment in the spring. Tractors and other wide farm implements will be traveling down rural roads. Drivers are encouraged to be patient, slow down and give these pieces of equipment room on the road. If a driver plans to pass a slow-moving farm implement, he or she should do so wisely. Never attempt to pass on hills or curves. Also, check for a "drive-way" on the left before passing. A farm implement moving to the right may be preparing for a wide turn, rather than allowing someone to pass.

Finally, spring weather brings more traffic to the roadways, as people begin taking advantage of Missouri's many recreation areas. Watch for changes in traffic patterns caused by more drivers on the road. One of the those changes to look for is an increase in motorcycles, bicycles and pedestrians. In nice weather, joggers are more common, and children are likely to walk or ride their bicycle to school. Stay alert.

In support of "The Drive To ZERO Highway Deaths," the Patrol encourages motorists and watercraft operators to protect themselves by making sure everyone in the vehicle is properly restrained in a seat belt or child restraint, and everyone in the vessel is wearing an approved life jacket. Missourians will not vote on marijuana legalization this year - But may have the chance in 2016 if a petition initiative continues to gather strength. (Photo credit: morguefile.com)

Push for pot pushed back to 2016

If Missouri is to become the next state to legalize marijuana, it won't happen this year, as supporters of the measure say they have decided not to try to put the issue before voters until 2016.

John Payne, executive director of Show-Me Cannabis, says both national and state polls show strong support for legalizing marijuana, but the group felt this was not the right year for a ballot initiative because of historically low voter turnout in midterm elections.

"If everyone in the state were to vote tomorrow, they would vote for full legalization, but unfortunately a lot of people are disengaged from the political process," he said.

Several bills before the Missouri Legislature would legalize marijuana for medicinal purposes, as well as some measures to reduce criminal penalties for marijuana possession.

Payne says his organization has just wrapped up a series of town hall meetings across the state to raise awareness of the issue, and the meetings drew large crowds and differing opinions.

"We've had a lot of community involvement from both sides," he said. "The chief of police, for instance, in Sikeston was there, so I think it's been very successful in making people aware of the issue and getting a conversation about it started in the state of Missouri."

Some law enforcement officials fear that legalizing marijuana would have negative effects on the state, but Payne points to Colorado and Washington, where he says legalizing marijuana has not led to an increase in crime or chaos.

USDA to help livestock producers affected by drought

The 2014 Farm Bill includes livestock disaster aid going back to 2011, so farmers who suffered forage or livestock loss in the drought of 2012 should prepare to document those losses.

According to Scott Brown, University of Missouri (MU) agricultural economist, the Congressional Budget Office is estimating that nearly $1 billion in disaster aid will be spent.

"Many Missouri livestock producers will be eligible for payments," Brown said. "Some payouts may be big... Regulations have not been released, [so] while the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) Farm Service Agency (FSA) prepares rules, farmers can prepare to make their cases."

Brown added: "There are few details in the disaster section of the farm bill. Those details must be spelled out before farmers can file claims at their FSA office."

To help producers navigate the requirements and the language of the new bill, MU Extension is planning to provide educational support to producers.

"Livestock disaster aid is our first priority," said Dave Baker, assistant dean for Extension, College of Agriculture, Food and Natural Resources.

MU Extension specialists will also assist FSA staff in their educational efforts over the next year. USDA also reported that livestock farmers can sign a local list at FSA offices to schedule enrollment. In many cases, farmers who have not received federal crop assistance may not be on local office rolls.

"We're trying to reach producers not normally involved in government programs," said Brent Carpenter, MU Extension agricultural business specialist in Sedalia, MO. "They may not be familiar with their local USDA office."

Signing the list and providing contact information, including an email address, will speed up the process, which FSA will begin on Tuesday, April 15.

"Being prepared will speed the process," Brown said.

Those first in line are not likely to deplete available funds, he added.

"From reading the farm bill, it appears there is no cap on funding."

Farmers, however, need not rush to their FSA offices to sign up for 2014 crop programs.

"I don't expect to see FSA rules on those until late fall," Brown explained.

After providing disaster aid, the next priority to help producers will be a new dairy margin protection program. For the interim, the Milk Income Loss Contract (MILC) was extended by Congress.

To summarize, the long-delayed passage of a farm bill in Congress slowed down rule-making. When the previous farm bill expired in 2011, disaster aid was lost. The new law, however, makes disaster help retroactive.

"There are many stories, and rumors, out there," Brown said, "but we can't give real help until USDA has the detailed regulations."

A team of state and regional MU Extension specialists will study the farm bill and rules to translate legal wording into farmer-friendly terms.

Payment cuts adversely affect Missouri hospitals

A new survey of Missouri's hospitals finds that nearly 1,000 full-time equivalent positions have been reduced in the last six months, and a hiring freeze has been implemented for another 2,145 positions. The reductions are in response to federal funding cuts, high uncompensated care costs and changing utilization patterns.

Between 2013 and 2019, payments that Missouri hospitals receive from the federal government will be reduced by nearly $4 billion. Without Medicaid reform, the state's hospitals will be left without the new revenue from expanding health insurance coverage to the uninsured and will continue to experience increased uncompensated care costs. Hospitals' provision of charity care in 2012 was up 32 percent since 2010. The survey shows that hospitals are beginning to address the fiscal imbalance by reducing staff, delaying and canceling planned capital investments and reducing service lines. Moreover, the cuts likely will become more pronounced later in the decade.

"So much of this debate has been about the philosophical dilemma over reforming Medicaid," said Dan Mehan, Missouri Chamber president and CEO. "We are here to demonstrate the very real dilemmas of inaction. We are talking about real workers who are losing their jobs. We are talking about real community hospitals that will be forced to reduce services or shut their doors. We are talking about real people suffering from heart attacks, strokes or other emergency medical conditions that will have to drive an hour and a half to the nearest hospital."

Just fewer than half of the 84 hospitals responding to the survey had laid off staff members, for a total of 998 health care employees statewide. More than half of the participating hospitals also indicated they had implemented a hiring freeze. Among these 49 hospitals, 2,145 positions are either currently or prospectively affected by a hiring freeze.

The survey included questions about plans for hospital capital investments as well. Although less than half of hospitals responded that they have canceled or delayed needed renovations or building repairs, the scope of the total lost investment is sizable. Of the 37 hospitals responding that they are delaying or canceling capital investments, 26 are from rural areas where the economic value of this investment is a significant local economic driver. Among all hospitals, the total in lost investment is conservatively estimated at more than $100 million.

"Eliminating as much as $100 million from building improvement projects also will negatively impact our economy," Mehan said. "It will stifle opportunities to provide health care most efficiently and effectively in Missouri. Instead, we will send our tax dollars to other states to improve their health care systems."

Maintaining local medical services — especially in small communities where hospitals are key to recruiting and retaining physicians — is essential to improving community health. Some hospital service lines, however, are profitable, while others are not. Generally, hospitals balance the costs to maintain a robust service line offering. With the scope of the cuts that hospitals are facing and the uncertainty of a reduction in the uninsured, though, hospitals may have no choice but to limit the scope of the services they offer.

Surveyed hospitals were asked what service lines are being considered for reduction. The following examples were offered as service reduction options by the 40 hospitals responding that service line cuts were under consideration:

- Rural health clinics and satellite clinics
- Home health and hospice
- Oncology service
- Hospital-provided ambulance services
- Inpatient and outpatient mental health/counseling services
- Wound care
- Diabetes mobile outreach program

"Medicaid reform matters," said Herb B. Kuhn, Missouri Hospital Association (MHA) president and CEO. "Without it, financial constraints will continue to limit hospitals' ability to deliver services to Missouri communities and support local economies. What this data demonstrates is that the damage is already occurring."

Earlier research indicates that without significant additional coverage through the health insurance marketplace and Medicaid, Missouri hospitals could lose 5,000 employees by the end of the decade. Moreover, budget projections through the end of 2020 indicate that reform could allow enough state savings through program management to offset any additional state cost as the state match increases.

"Medicaid reform will not be an expense for the state; it is an investment where returns are measured in sustaining and creating new jobs, increased productivity for our state's workers and improved health in our communities," Kuhn said. "We have a chance to return Missouri's federal taxes to the state and use those resources to shape our health care infrastructure through new and innovative delivery models that are designed to deliver on health care's the Triple Aim — better care, better health and lower cost."

"Medicaid reform is a once-in-a-generation chance to reshape the state's health care future," Kuhn added. "This debate shouldn't be about ideology; it's about common sense leadership for the state of Missouri."

Farm Bill ensures more opportunities for producers

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced on Monday, March 24, that there are increased opportunities for producers as a result of the 2014 Farm Bill.

"Our nation's farmers and ranchers are the engine of the rural economy. These improvements to our Farm Loan Programs will help a new generation begin farming and grow existing farm operations," said Secretary Vilsack. "[This] announcement represents just one part of a series of investments the new Farm Bill makes in the next generation of agriculture, which is critical to economic growth in communities across the country."

The Farm Bill expands lending opportunities for thousands of farmers and ranchers to begin and continue operations, including greater flexibility in determining eligibility, raising loan limits and emphasizing beginning and socially disadvantaged producers. Changes that will take effect immediately include:

- An elimination of loan term limits for guaranteed operating loans.
- A modification of the definition of beginning farmer, using the average farm size for the county as a qualifier instead of the median farm size.

- A modification of the Joint Financing Direct Farm Ownership Interest Rate to 2 percent less than the regular Direct Farm Ownership rate, with a floor of 2.5 percent. Previously, the rate was established at 5 percent.
- An increase of the maximum loan amount for Direct Farm Ownership down payments from $225,000 to $300,000.
- An elimination of the rural residency requirement for Youth Loans, allowing urban youth to benefit.
- Debt forgiveness on Youth Loans, which will not prevent borrowers from obtaining additional loans from the federal government.
- An increase of the guarantee amount on Conservation Loans from 75 to 80 percent and 90 percent for socially disadvantaged borrowers and beginning farmers.
- Microloans no longer counting toward loan term limits for veterans and beginning farmers.

Additional modifications must be implemented through the rule-making processes. Visit the FSA Farm Bill website at www.fsa.usda.gov/farmbill for detailed information and updates to farm loan programs.

Rosenbohm named News-Press Player of the Year

Megan Rosenbohm, a senior at Nodaway-Holt R-7, has been lauded in newspapers, including Mound City News and St. Joseph News-Press, and the modest player with the fantastic stats — multiple double-doubles, triple-doubles, quadruple-doubles, plus more than 2,000 points scored in her high school career — now has another title to add to her collection of awards and honors: St. Joseph News-Press Girls' Basketball Player of the Year.

According to the St. Joseph News-Press, Rosenbohm boasts powerful numbers, including 683 points, 192 rebounds, 170 steals and 137 assists in the 2013-2014 season. The senior guard, however, is appealingly humble. As her coach, David Carroll, previously told the Mound City News, "She's a very unselfish player. She'd almost rather assist than score a point."

Rosenbohm is next headed to Southwest Baptist University in Bolivar, MO. In the meantime, the athlete is racking up wins with track and field; most recently, she took first places in the 200- and 400-meter dashes, the long jump and the triple jump at the Warrior Relays in Albany, MO, on Monday, April 7.
