Customers would bring in their radio batteries during the day to be charged, because they would want to listen to the radio in the evenings and the batteries would run completely down. Eli later became a full-time electrician in 1932, and was well known for the development of gooseneck pole lights that he installed throughout the county.

Glenn began working for his dad doing wiring when he was about 16 years old. After Glenn married his wife, Carolyn, they lived a short time near Oregon, MO, before moving to Mound City. Glenn, being young and desiring a 'regular' paycheck, was hired as foreman of the Mound City Manufacturing Corporation (the building that sits just west of the interstate now). He worked there for 10 years, from 1965 to 1975, while he worked to build his electrical business at nights and on the weekends. After the manufacturing plant shut down in 1975, Glenn stepped out into business full-time. Glenn continued to provide electrical needs for a host of quality customers in Holt County until his retirement in February of 2012.

"I've been doing this for 52 years now," stated Glenn. "The biggest thing with retirement is letting go. I've earned my customers' respect over the years, and to reciprocate that loyalty, I still go on calls with my son-in-law out of respect for the many, many great customers I've worked for throughout the years."

Glenn's son-in-law, Kent Klaas, has been working with Glenn for 2 1/2 years. Kent spent many of those months commuting from Olathe, KS, before moving his family to Mound City in CKE is an acronym that for now denotes Caton Klaas Electric. It can also be used for Cindy, Kent Electric, or in the future, when ideally another Caton heir will take the reins, it could stand for Cole Klaas Electric (after Glenn's grandson, Cole).

For now, the ride along retiree, Glenn, enjoys the trips through the familiar countryside, recounting to his successor the many electrical tales of homes and farms that have 'generated the circuit of 52 years of electrical service'.

What happened to Joplin?

At 5:41 p.m. on May 22, 2011, a tornado touched down in Joplin and was on the ground for six miles.

It tracked into the neighboring town of Duquesne and then rural areas. At times it was at least one mile wide. It damaged or destroyed 8,000 homes, 18,000 cars, 400 businesses, injured more than 1,000 people and killed 161.

Some of the buildings damaged or destroyed included schools, churches, restaurants and other businesses, and St. John's Medical Center — one of the town's two hospitals.

After the tornado, there was no electricity in the destruction zone for about a week, and the city was without water. The area was declared a federal disaster area.

What is a Tornado?

"Tornado" was a 14-century sailor's word for a violent, windy thunderstorm. The word may have come from the Spanish word "tronada," which means thunderstorm. Tornadoes are funnel- or cone-shaped clouds with winds that can reach up to 300 miles per hour and cause damage for miles.

They usually occur in March through August, but they can form at any time. They can happen in any state, but usually touch down in the Central Plains or Midwestern states — an area known as "Tornado Alley."

Meteorologists rate tornadoes according to their size and strength on a scale of 1 to 5. An EF-5, the kind that hit Joplin and Duquesne, is the most powerful. It also was the deadliest tornado in 60 years.

> First responders: Heroes to the rescue

Many people went to work immediately to help rescue those trapped in the debris or to care for those who were injured. Others organized shelters where people could sleep, eat and get clothing and other basic necessities. Among the first responders were 119 fire and rescue services and 68 ambulance districts from across Missouri. They were honored in April at a ceremony at the state Capitol in Jefferson City, and all received medals.

Making Progress

In the weeks and months that followed, more than 125,000 volunteers from across the U.S. poured into Joplin to help shovel debris, to set up distribution centers where people could go for food and toiletries, and to begin rebuilding or repairing homes. Some of them ended up staying and still are volunteering today.

Progress has been made: Schools were set up in vacant warehouses and a local mall and started on time on Aug. 17. Many of the damaged or destroyed businesses have rebuilt and reopened, and new homes are popping up every day.

Walk.

The Joplin Globe newspaper went to press just one hour late—at 1 a.m.—on the morning of May 23. Despite the loss of a colleague and many of their own homes in the tornado, the staff was on the job providing news and information for their readers. Missouri Press Association has documented the staff's efforts in a film,

"Deadline in Disaster."

Emergency management officials say the most important thing anyone can do to prevent injury or death during a tornado is to seek shelter as soon as tornado sirens sound. The safest places are tornado shelters, basements, and closets, bathrooms or rooms with no windows. Many people who survived the Joplin tornado took cover in their bathtubs and covered themselves with blankets to protect against flying debris.

Springfield

FEMA advises families to prepare for stormy weather by making a plan for what they will do when the tornado sirens sound and by putting together a home emergency kit. A basic emergency supply kit could include the following recommended items:

- Water (one gallon of water per person per day for at least three days, for drinking and sanitation)
- Food (at least a three-day supply of nonperishable food)
 - Battery-powered or hand-crank radio and a NOAA Weather Radio with tone alert and extra batteries for both
 - Flashlight and extra batteries
 - First aid kit
 - Whistle to signal for help
 - Dust mask (to help filter contaminated air) and plastic sheeting and duct tape to
 - shelter-in-place • Wrench or pliers to turn off utilities
 - Local maps
 - Cell phone with chargers, inverter or solar charger

Augie's bike helmet saves the day!

Augie, a 9-year-old Joplin boy, was safe because of good decisions by his mother, Natalie. She instructed him to put on his bike helmet, thinking of potential debris thrown up by the twister. When the tornado hit their home, the bathroom toilet was ripped from the floor and thrown through the air, striking Augie in the head. "I saw the tornado warning, I heard the sirens, I looked outside and I saw the dark cloud, and we made the split-second decision to take a blanket, take a pillow and our little puppy" and put them all with Augie inside the tub, overlaying it with a bed mattress, Natalie said. Their home was badly damaged, but Augie, his mother and the puppy survived.

Lexi, an everyday hero!

Eight-year-old Lexi, heard a warning on television that a tornado was heading toward her city. She insisted that her parents stop what they were doing and get in the car immediately to seek shelter at her grandparents' house, which has a basement.

Her mom and dad thought they would finish dinner first, but Lexi wouldn't let them. By going to her grandparents' house, they were safe and later learned that their home was destroyed. Had they stayed there, they might not have survived. Lexi was honored by the American Red Cross as an Everyday Hero and will receive a bronze cross for lifesaving this fall from the Girl Scouts.

This special feature was written by Andra Stefanoni of The Joplin Globe and produced by the Missouri Press Foundation.

American Legion members conduct memorial services

American Legion Post members- From Mound City, Craig, Fairfax, Rock Port, Tarkio and Westboro were part of the firing squad, pictured above, who performed a 'volley of three' during the Memorial Day Services at the Mount Hope Cemetery in Mound City on Monday, May 28. Around 15-20 legion members from the Missouri posts were on hand to perform the ceremonies at all the cemeteries. Tim Morehouse, commander of the Allen-Schiffern American Legion Post #199 of Tarkio, MO, was in charge of the program for the day. Don Martin, chaplain of the American Legion Post #32 of Westboro, MO, gave the prayer. A wreath was placed at the tomb of the unknown soldier at each of the services. Sisters Nancy Daugherty, Kathy Herron and Judy DeBuhr sang the National Anthem. It was a warm day for those in attendance, which may have been the reason for slimmer crowd attendance.

Many people honored and paid tribute to loved ones- During the 2012 Memorial Day weekend observance, by placing flowers and other memorabilia at the gravesites of those who have passed on. Grave stones at Mt. Hope Cemetery in Mound City, pictured above, were no exception. American flags lined the drive through Mt. Hope Cemetery as an added reminder of those who fought for the freedom enjoyed by every man, woman and child in this great country of the United States of America.

those who have served and sacrificed for the freedoms enjoyed by all Americans. Cemeteries are decorated as a tribute to loved ones who have passed on before. The letters and writings shared in this article were taken from the front page of the Mound City News-Jeffersonian dated November 8, 1918, just days before the end of World War I was declared on November 11, 1918. On that date, hostilities formally ended "at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month" with the German signing of the Armistice. November 11 became known as Armistice Day (later called Veterans' Day).

The war was in action. fought by the Allies on one side, and the Central Powers on the other. No previous conflict had mobilized so many soldiers or involved so many in the field of battle. By its end, the war had become the second bloodiest conflict in recorded history, infamous for trench warfare. More than 9 million died on the battlefield, and nearly that many more on the home fronts because of food shortages, genocide and ground combat.

On the aforementioned front page, in a special box arm. titled, They Gave Their All For the Flag, it stated: A hip. number of letters that have come from the boys of Co. Landowners play key role in elk restoration selves as being lynchpins in Missouri's elk restoration program. Nevertheless, their efforts to create habitat that benefits elk – and a wide range of other wildlife could make the difference between success and failure of Missouri's latest conservation saga.

Habitat on private land helps ensure the future of Missouri's growing elk herd

Since beginning its elk restoration program last year, the Missouri Department of Conservation (MDC) has brought 69 elk to a 221,000acre restoration zone in and around Peck Ranch Conservation Area. The restoration program aims to re-establish elk to an area they inhabited until the mid-1800s, eventually building a herd of approximately 400 elk.

The Mortons were among 20 landowners from Reynolds, Shannon and Carter counties who attended a workshop earlier this year to learn how to make their 500 deer and turkey and maybe even elk eventually. They were surprised what they learned.

"Everything they talked about, from glades to woodlands, we've got that on our property," says Sandy. Ron calls the event "very inforthe Shannon-Reynolds county line. Approximately 100 landowners took part in the second round of elk habitat workshops in Shannon County.

In recent years, MDC and federal agencies with have turned to management strategies that produce landscapes more closely repre-settlement sembling conditions. This laid the foundation for elk restoration, but Dent says much remains to be done.

Besides showing landownacres more productive for ers how to manage for elk, the MDC shares the cost of some management practices on private land in the restoration zone. Several Missouri communities hit by 2011 floods to receive additional help in repairing, replacing damaged infrastructure, Gov. Nixon announces

Nearly $1.5 million in Community Development Block Grant awards will assist in a variety of public works' projects, help towns and counties continue to rebuild

Gov. Jay Nixon recently announced that the state would provide nearly $1.5 million in additional assistance to help several Missouri towns and counties in repairing or replacing roads, bridges and other public infrastructure damaged or destroyed by the devastating floods of 2011. Mississippi, Pemiscot and Wayne counties, as well as the towns of Bertrand, Big Lake, Craig, Glasgow, Hornersville and Morehouse, will receive a total of $1,497,118 in Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding.

"Several Missouri counties endured devastating flooding during the spring and summer of 2011, and one year later, we continue to help local communities rebuild and restore," Gov. Nixon said. "This additional funding will help towns and counties across Missouri repair critical infrastructure damaged by the floods, such as roads, bridges and sewer systems. From the very beginning, I said we would continue to stand with the communities that were hit by disasters through the entire recovery process. Today's announcement shows that commitment continues unabated."

Eight of the nine projects announced also are receiving supplement funding from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), and the CDBG funding awarded by the state of Missouri will help cover the total cost of receiving CDBG funding include:

• Mississippi County had two bridges and one county road that were significantly damaged by the floods. The county is receiving CDBG funding of $684,924 to replace bridges 310 and 312 and remove debris from both areas, and to repair County Road 310. The county also is receiving a matching FEMA grant of $1.9 million for the projects.

- Pemiscot County had two bridges and one county road significantly damaged. The county is receiving $258,059 in CDBG funds to replace bridges 232 and 234, and to repair County Road 344. Pemiscot County also is receiving a matching FEMA grant of $614,729.
- In Wayne County, the bridge over Clark Creek on County Road 335 was severely damaged. The bridge serves about 60 local residents, is on a school bus route and is frequently used by emergency vehicles. The county is receiving $87,350 in CDBG funding to replace the bridge.

In addition, the governor announced block grant funding for six Missouri towns that experienced significant flooding last year:

- Mississippi County, which had damage to several city streets, will receive $57,167 in CDBG funding for the needed repairs, plus a matching FEMA grant of $70,328.

- The City of Craig, in Holt County, which sustained serious flood damage to its sewer system, is being awarded $150,936 in CDBG funds to make repairs to the wastewater system and install new sewer pumps. The city also is receiving a matching FEMA grant of $41.871.
- The City of Glasgow, in Howard County, which suffered serious flood damage to its city sewage lagoon from silt and sand, is receiving CDBG funding of $158,419 to clean and repair the lagoon to restore it to full capacity, and also is receiving a matching FEMA grant of $475,255.
- The City of Hornersville, in Dunklin County, which sustained flood damage to city streets, will receive $39,942 in CDBG funds to repair the streets, plus a matching FEMA grant of $58,026.
- The City of Morehouse, in New Madrid County, which suffered damage to its sewer system, is receiving CDBG funding of $16,802 • The City of Bertrand, in for the needed repairs, plus a matching FEMA grant of $26,332.

This announcement is in addition to $4.6 million in CDBG funding already announced by Gov. Nixon to assist Missouri communities with flood recovery. DNA reveals different origins for Missouri mountain lions

Four of the 2011 sightings yielded hair or tissue samples adequate for DNA testing. Eleven western states maintain databases of mountain lion DNA. Comparing the genetic makeup of cougars found in Missouri enables biologists to learn if they came from one of these states.

DNA tests tied two young male cougars to the Black Hills area of South Dakota. One was shot by a raccoon hunter in Ray County in January, 2011. A Texas County homeowner shot the other one in September.

DNA from the young male mountain lion killed by coyote hunters in Macon County in January, 2011, was traced to central Montana. The remaining cougar, which left a tuft of hair on a barbed-wire fence after crossing the road in front of a motorist in Oregon County, was related to mountain lions from Colorado. DNA showed the Oregon County cat also was a male.

"Large carnivores have big home ranges," says Resource Scientist Jeff Beringer, "and males disperse long distances in search of females. It seems logical that the rate of dispersal would be greater when cats have repopulated available habitat in neighboring states, but there is also an innate drive 2011 remains a puzzling aberration in Missouri's mountain lion history. The largest number of sightings documented by MDC in any previous year was two, in 2006 and 2010. MDC has confirmed two sightings so

"Increased public awareness and the growing popularity of trail cameras might account for part of the increase in sightings," says Beringer, "but last year's spike is hard to explain. What we now know for sure is that mountain lions are traveling a long way to get here.

Conservation notes

Spring Turkey Season ended and, overall, the state harvested 2,120 more birds than last year for a total of 40,447. When combined with the 2012 Youth Season, the total increased to 44,766. The Northwest Region harvested 5,260 birds, up from 4,828 last year. Holt County finished with 339 birds. Furthermore, the Holt County harvest is broken down by category, with 296 adult gobblers, 7 bearded hens, and 26 juvenile gobblers harvested. The total for Holt County alone is a 10 percent increase from the 2011 Spring Turkey Season.

Overall, the state harvest was up due to the increased hatch and survival of poults last summer. Even though the Northwest Region saw an increase, it was among the lowest in the state. Evidence of this can be seen in low harvest numbers of juvenile gobblers. The Missouri Department of Conservation Turkey Biologist, Jason Isabelle, stated that, after a successful hatch as seen across most of Missouri, juvenile gobblers can make up 20 to 30 percent of the harvest total. The statewide percentage

Earlier this month, the 2012 was 28. Here in the region, the juvenile gobblers consisted of 19 percent of the harvest and in Holt County it was 10 percent.

The early start to spring provided some pleasant weather for hunters to be afield, but provided more challenging hunting with the early green-up of the forest, decreasing visibility. Consequently, the Department of Conservation recorded four non-fatal firearms-related turkey hunting incidents. These incidences can be directly related to hunter judgment mistakes by not positively identifying a target before shooting.

Other notable news for the state includes the start of the upcoming squirrel season. The season for grey and fox squirrels runs from May 26 through February 15, 2013. To legally take squirrels, hunters need to obtain a small game permit from one of the local vendors or by visiting www.mdc.mo.gov and following the links to purchase an e-permit. As a reminder, 2011 small game permits expired on February 29, 2012, and this expiration date can be found at the top center of every

Swimming pool alive with activity

The Mound City swimming pool- Opened for the summer under 90 degree plus conditions on Sunday, May 27. The pool hosted large crowds the first two days it was open, as young people were eager to go for that first swim of the season. On Monday, a smaller crowd was present, but swimmers were still having lots of fun. Pictured above, in the back, Emily Tubbs, left, was being coaxed by 'big brother' Connor Tubbs toward the mushroom fountain. In front, brother Seth Oswald, left, preferred to stay on the side of the pool, while 'big brother', John, right, repeatedly showed him how to jump in and go under.
