(LEFT) Beverly Quimby, left, and Barbara Deats, right. - Joined seven other seniors on the day room at Tiffany Heights Care Center in Mound City on Friday, April 29, to talk about motherhood. Other mothers in the discussion were VanOrman, Kathleen Rhoades, Margaret Voltmer, Carol Ball, Virginia Beal, Irene Carroll and Winnie Scott.

As the nine residents entered the day room of Tiffany Heights Care Center in Mound City, they weren’t sure what was going on. The nine ladies had been summoned for a discussion on motherhood. As the ladies gathered around, one woman seemed to remember much of what they thought might be important.

Eventually, the first recollection brought another, and another, until the room was full of chatter and laughter about the antics of the children from years ago. Barbara Deats, a mother of five, decided to dress up as a witch one Halloween and go to her children’s school in Rock Port, MO. She had all of her children dressed, but her first-born daughter announced that it was mother’s “She recognized my eyes,” laughed Barbara. “My high school hand son was mortified, and told me to be too restrained.”

Other mothers soon recalled funny stories that could have been true, but luckily turned out alright. Margaret Voltmer’s two youngest sons, Neil and Dale, tried to light a fire in the front yard when they were little. “Thank heavens most of the yard was rocks or the house might have burned down,” exclaimed Margaret. Carol Ball recalled the time two of her sons came to the house, hanging their heads. "They wanted to confess pushing their brother out of the barn loft,” said Carol. “I went running out there and, thankfully, he wasn’t hurt.” Irene Carroll was expecting a baby while her husband was fighting in the war. “My seven year-old son discovered he could nuture me when he was in trouble,” she smiled. “But eventually, he returned, took his punishment, and then we set down and I read to him.”

The joyous, northwestern Missouri, on the faces of the women. Their eyes gleamed with remembered images dancing in their minds. When asked about chores, washing water, giving baths and washing clothes, the ladies didn’t even flinch. It was a part of their lives.

Residents at Tiffany Heights in Mound City enjoyed the start of the week on Monday, April 25, with Bible study. Pastor Paul Grant led the song and message. During the afternoon, an outing was just the right activity to follow. Campers traveled to Falls City, NE, to get some plants for planting. They got a chance to try their newly-learned ways of exploring the flower beds. They also had the opportunity to remember why they are growing these plants. They enjoyed the day out on Sunday, April 24, Inter-VanDorn, Dolores Hawkins, Dorothy Sommer, Barbara Dotzel and Victoria DAVIS. It is a trip to Frenzy in Falls City was also enjoyed before the ride home.

Occupational Therapy Month was April. During April, residents get a chance to learn about the importance of occupational therapy with “Therapy Fair Day” on Tuesday, Occupational Therapy-Certified, gives residents an overview of the tools of the trade to use. They also hand a check to work with some weighted balls and to work on core strength movement. Later in the afternoon on Monday, April 26, residents will put some of the therapy into practice with doing flowers. They have given the flowers to their loved ones and then planted them for use at the paths. They were lucky to have a resident gardener, Virginia Lentz, on hand to lend a hand in doing the done. The plants were made so that the residents could sit and enjoy the days. This project was just what everyone needed, however the wind was a little strong. It was a nice day.

Shannon Tharp, Occupational Therapist-Certified, second year resident at Tiffany Heights in Mound City, read her dynamometer and ergometer. Shannon read her paper on working with residents with some of these tools.

Will encour aged the students at the banquet to set high goals and persevere through the difficult times. “If I can accomplish it, anyone can,” he said. “I had no idea when I found that 46-year-old mile record un der this stage that it would take me where it would.” Will’s first pole vault height was 7’06.00, a freshman in high school. “That height was not even that great for a high school girl,” he stopped. “My coach told me maybe I should consider a different event.” Will persevered, however; and his best jump in college was 17’02.00, just inches from his goal of jumping 10 feet higher than the national record at school. “My ability to pole vault took me from Craig (MO), to where I am today,” added Will. “It was given opportunities that I never imagined.” He stressed to the students to always keep doors open, opportunities open and never think that it’s not going to be there. Cindy Sons, a preschool director, had been living with constant knee pain and was unable to get up and down with the kids. When it became time for knee replacement surgery, she knew just where to go – SSM Health St. Francis Hospital.

"The doctor did a great job explaining things to me," she says, "And the nurses talked me through what was going to happen, like teachers."

The results were everything Cindy had hoped for. So much so, she recently had her other knee replaced. As she puts it, "I was confident this group of people would take excellent care of me again."
